11. SHRI PRAMOD MAHAJAN: Will the Minister of EXTERNAL AFFAIRS be pleased to state:

(a) what is the amount paid by U.N. per person to Government of India for the Indian Police Contingent sent to Namibia in 1989-90;

(b) whether this amount was transferred to members of this police contingent;

(e) if so, what are the details thereof; and

(d) if not, what are the reasons therefor?

THE MINISTER OF STATE IN THE MINISTRY OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS (SHRI EDUARDO FALEIRO): (a) to (d) The U.N. paid an allowance ranging from US $ 62/- to US $ 80/- per day per person depending upon location in Namibia and whether housing or food was provided, directly to the Indian Police Contingent deputed to Namibia. These amounts were paid over and above their pay and allowances and other admissible benefits they continued to receive in India from the Government. In addition, the Government was reimbursed the cost of providing monitors at a standard rate of US $ 9505/- plus a supplement of US $ 280/-per month per person based on 25 per cent of the authorised strength of the contingent. This was on account of pay and allowances, mobilisation charges
